- Energy and Climate Policy

Responsibilities and Expectations:

- To analyse and evaluate existing material on the subject, such as books, journal articles, and other publications.
- Gather information by doing field research; attend area seminars and lectures.
- Apply appropriate research techniques including surveys, case studies and primary interviews.
- Carry out quantitative, econometric and computational analysis (preferred).
- Plan, design and implement research projects.
- Collaborate on policy briefs, articles, blogs and other publications with in-house fellow researchers
- Write, review and edit materials for publication.
- Conduct subject-specific educational outreach to universities, research centres and other institutions.
- May be called on to also provide support across departmental lines and for other Fellows.

Preferred Qualifications:

- Indian nationality preferred.
- Masters' degree in international affairs or energy-related subjects
- Minimum four years of relevant work experience. Business journalists and business reporters with at least three years' experience may also apply.
- Experience of working in government, multilateral institutions, financial institutions, multinational businesses or think tanks will be given added value.
- Good research, quantitative, and writing skills.
- Proofing and editing skills with attention to detail.
- Enthusiastic and creative team player with ability to work both independently and collaboratively.

Please submit a CV, a covering letter indicating your interest in Gateway House and motivations for working with us, and two relevant writing samples, to jobs@gatewayhouse.in
